PRES. BATEMAN

President Bateman to focus on academic, spiritual education

By JEANETTE BENNETT and JANNA NIELSEN
Universe Staff Writers

As the first general authority to be president of BYU, President Merrill J. Bateman plans to focus on improving education by emphasizing the parallels of spiritual learning and secular study.

President Bateman commenced his leadership of BYU Jan. 1 after serving for a year and a half as Presiding Bishop of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"We exist as an institution to educate students in both academic and spiritual dimensions," President Bateman said.

While he believes the goals and aims of the university will largely remain the same, one area he does hope to improve is the teaching of students at the freshman and sophomore levels. This may be done through hiring more teachers, using more creativity in teaching and making more efficient use of technology, he said.

"Our biggest challenge will be ensuring that we're equal to the quality of students that come to BYU," the new president said.

As he approached his new responsibility, President Bateman discussed some of the hot topics on campus.

Concerning academic freedom, President Bateman noted the unique atmosphere sought at BYU. "There are fundamental doctrines we hold as sacred that are eternal truths; but there are still a myriad of topics that remain open for everyone to discuss," he said.

If a person at BYU becomes an advocate for the adversary, it is appropriate that they no longer be involved with the university, he said.

President Bateman acknowledged that this position is no different than any other private or church-owned university.

Although BYU's position on academic freedom will not be altered, physical facilities around campus will continue to undergo change.

"There are a few more projects coming," he said. "Some need to be looked at very seriously with regard to whether there are better ways to provide the education than with brick or mortar."

Although the continuing construction will impede campus travel, President Bateman hopes all students will make attending Devotionals a top priority.

"Devotionals are a key part of the education," he said. "In the 1960s when I was here, almost every student went. They were a focal point of the week. I hope we can capture part of that again."

Devotional speakers will continue to include campus, political and church leaders.

President Bateman and his wife Marilyn Scholes, will speak at the semester's first devotional Tuesday.

As a general authority, President Bateman's major responsibility will be presiding over BYU, although he will have other assignments and meetings to attend from time to time.

Of his dual calling as a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy and BYU's president, he said, "It gives a signal as to the type of tone we want as a university. The brethren are making a statement."

President Bateman is not a stranger to BYU administration. He was the dean of the College of Business and the School of Management from 1975 to 1979.

Clinton's budget plan rejected

See related story on page 3

Associated Press

Republicans rejected President Clinton's plan for a balanced budget Monday and warned that they will use government programs they don't like if there's no agreement on budget plan in the next few weeks. "We are going to fund only those programs we want to fund," said House Republican Whip Tom Lantos of Texas. Spending bills must originate in the House, he said, adding, "We're in charge. We don't have to negotiate with the Senate, we don't have to negotiate with the Democrats."

Clinton ended a three-week shutdown of federal programs Saturday when he acceded to Republican demands and offered a new seven-year balanced budget plan.

That announcement kicked in congressional action to fund all government programs, but only through Jan. 26. If there's no budget agreement by then, federal offices could close for the third time this fiscal year.

At that point, DeLay said on NBC's "Meet the Press," if House Republicans don't want to fund programs they don't like, such as the National Endowment for the Arts or the Legal Services Corporation, "we just won't bring it up on the floor and fund it."

The Clinton proposal provided far less savings in Medicare, Medicaid and welfare than the seven-year plan that emerged from Congress last year, and would cut taxes over seven years by $87 billion, well below the $241 billion sought by the Republicans. "It shows us that Bill Clinton is the big spending liberal Democrat we always thought he was," said Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"We are a long and far way apart." "We're very concerned about whether there are two snow jobs going on here in Washington," said Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., speaking of the snowstorm that shut down the capital and led to cancellation of further budget talks Sunday.

Clinton, asked as he left church what he would do about Republican criticisms of his budget, replied, "Keep working for it."

The Republican response was not all negative. Lott, also on CBS, said the Clinton budget was "a positive step. He finally gave in to submitting a real budget."

Study Abroad Frustrated by shutdown

By GRETEL J. BACKMAN
Universe Staff Writer

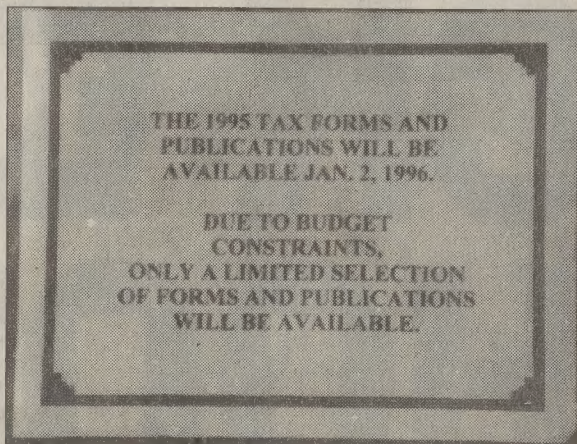

BYU has felt the impact of the government shutdowns in both its administrative and student needs. The shutdowns have hit everyone differently, but all have been affected in some way.

The Financial Aid Office has not been hurt much by the shutdown and continues to process loans and grants as usual.

Steve Olsen, federal program coordinator for Financial Aid, said while there may be slight delays for students just now applying for federal aid, the BYU Financial Aid Office is in full operation. Because Pell grants were already appropriated in 1995, those funds have not been affected.

Patricia Miller, an employee of the Department of Study Abroad who has spent many early mornings at work lately, explains a different story.

There is a group of BYU students waiting in London who applied for passports two months ago, she said.

READ IT AND WEEP: This sign hung on the Provo Federal Building Friday, indicating decreased services due to the nation's budget battle. The shutdown has had little effect on BYU's Financial Aid Office, though.

Mark Goldrup
Daily Universe

Those students were caught in the first government shutdown and now in the second.

"There's nobody there to process the applications," Miller said. "We've been on the phone for hours and days and weeks."

When students call the passport offices they get a recording that explains they are closed due to the government shutdown. The passports are locked in closed offices, Miller said. Study Abroad has contacted the highest authorities involved, including the chief immigration officer in London and the CEO of United Airlines. Both parties have agreed to let students board the airlines, Miller said, but not without individual clearance for each student.

"It's been a hassle," she said. "We're trying to work it out. We've had to appeal to the highest authorities."

Students who are about to leave for Jerusalem for Winter Semester are not affected by the shutdown because they applied for their passports months ago, the Jerusalem Center office said. However, students applying for Spring Term will be affected if the government doesn't open up soon.

Anna Bailey, secretary for the English Language Center, tells of one student who returned home to Honduras for Christmas and now he can't come back because the U.S. Embassy isn't open.

"We've had several new students who haven't been able to get visas from the embassy," Bailey said. "They have already made travel plans and will lose their plane ticket money."

U.S. passports not issued until agencies reopen

By MEGAN
CHRISTOFFERSON
Assistant City Editor

When some 30,000 Utah workers on federal furlough return to work, they will face piles of backlogged paperwork and long lines of people anxious for their services.

Since the federal shutdown began Dec. 15, passports have become a scarce commodity in the United States. The passport office is considered a non-essential government agency, and passport applications have not been processed since the shutdown began.

According to Rick Wilcox, manager over customer service at the Provo post office, they send 10 to 20 passports to the federal passport agency on a daily basis. "But then they just sit there," Wilcox said.

Hundreds of applications from the Provo post office alone are stacking up at the federal office where hundreds of thousands of applications nationwide are awaiting final processing.

Wilcox thinks it will take five to six weeks for the passport backlog to be caught up when they do reopen their doors.

"We have been suggesting that if people aren't leaving until after March, they wait until the passport agency is up and running," Wilcox said.

However for many already waiting to leave the country, getting a passport has become a nightmare.

LDS church spokesman Don LeFevre said because the church works so far in advance on passports and visas, the church's missionary effort has thus far not been negatively affected by the shutdown.

Y study abroad and international students haven't been so lucky. Many can't get passports to leave or visas to return to the country.

Federal workers at the Social Security Administration in Provo have been working through the shutdown to provide social security checks to retirees and others. However, they have not been issuing new social security numbers.

"This affects people at BYU who are foreign students who can't get numbers and can't get jobs or get paid," said Randy Marchant, district manager at the Provo office.

LOOKING FOR PEACE: A U.S. staff sergeant braves the cold on a pontoon bridge over Sava River. NATO troops came under fire for the fourth time this weekend, and patience is running thin for the reconciliation of the Muslims and Croats in Bosnia.

Fragile Bosnian peace on verge of collapse

Associated Press

MOSTAR, Bosnia-Herzegovina — With NATO troops and armor patrolling the streets, the European administrator of Mostar warned yesterday that Bosnia's fragile peace plan will collapse if Muslims and Croats cannot come together in this bitter, battered town.

Elsewhere in Bosnia, NATO's patience began to wear thin as its troops came under fire for the fourth time over the weekend. No one was hurt, but the alliance warned it will blast back with increasing might.

In Mostar, two killings and an upsurge in shooting have put the city on edge, and could doom efforts to reunite the town — the scene of bitter fighting in the Muslim-Croat war within-a-war in 1993-94.

A failure in Mostar would undermine the already weak Muslim-Croat federation, which was awarded 51 percent of Bosnia under the U.S.-brokered peace deal signed Dec. 14.

"If there's no answer for Mostar, there will be no answer for the federation, and there will be no balance against the third side, the Serbian side," said Hans Koschnick of Germany, who administers Mostar for the European Union. "That would mean a new crisis."

The federation is the cornerstone of the peace plan and was designed by the Americans as a counterbalance to the Serbs. If the Muslim-Croat entity collapses, the Bosnian Serbs will not feel bound by the Paris accord.

The Croats in the western part of the country, a region known as Herzegovina, claim support from Croatian President Franjo Tudjman. They have long sought to make Mostar the capital of their self-styled Herzeg Bosna republic.

Mostar, meanwhile, has groped for normalcy. On Dec. 1, residents began testing peace by crossing the Neretva River that splits the town via a temporary bridge, which replaced the city's famed landmark bridge that was destroyed in the war.

But after a young Muslim and a Croat policeman were killed and two Muslim policemen were wounded, Koschnick called Saturday on the NATO-led force monitoring Bosnia's peace to reinforce the 180 European police in Mostar.

Spanish soldiers and six armored vehicles deployed along the Boulevard, Mostar's main thoroughfare, marking the Croat-Muslim front line between jagged shells of houses, bared to the brick by artillery fire.

Koschnick wrote to officials on both sides warning he would ban movement between the two halves of the city unless there was a "drastic, immediate improvement."

Things began unraveling in the early hours of New Year's Day. Alen Mustovic, a 17-year-old Muslim, drove to Croat territory to visit his Croat girlfriend. He failed to stop at Croat police checkpoints and was shot dead. Three days later, two Muslim policemen were wounded by sniper fire from the Croat west bank. Then on Saturday, Croat policeman Zeljko Ljubic was shot dead while patrolling the Boulevard. EU police said the gunfire came from the Muslim east bank.

Peres accused of violating Palestinian peace

DURA, West Bank — Yasser Arafat blamed his partner in peace, Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, yesterday for the assassination of an Islamic militant who had masterminded suicide attacks against Israel.

Arafat, speaking at a rally, said the killing of Yehiya Ayyash violated the spirit of the peace process. He accused Israel of undermining PLO authority by carrying out the attack in the Gaza Strip, which is under his control.

"This is not what we have agreed upon. I appeal to Peres, the prime minister, to stop damaging the Palestinian security inside Palestinian territory," Arafat said.

Israel "should not kill and assassinate on Palestinian land the struggler, the martyr Yehiya Ayyash," Arafat said. The crowd of 4,000 applauded and chanted "Allahu akbar" — God is great.

Arafat's laudatory characterization of Ayyash was a departure from his recent refusal to praise terrorists. The statement appeared to be an attempt to ensure he could not be blamed in any way for the killing. Any indication that Arafat had allowed the killing would aggravate tensions between the PLO and Palestinians opposed to the peace process and erode support for him ahead of the Jan. 20 elections for the self-rule legislature.

'Free Willy' gets a new $7 million home

NEWPORT, Ore. — Keiko the whale, the ailing star of the "Free Willy" movies, got a warm welcome Sunday as he journeyed to the new home built for him with $7 million in donations from around the world.

United Parcel Service, touting its biggest delivery ever, arranged for a chartered C-130 cargo plane to carry Keiko in a giant water-filled container. Because of the 2,000-pound cargo, the plane had to make refueling stops in Monterrey, Mexico and Phoenix.

People lined the highway to wave goodbye earlier Sunday as Keiko was hoisted into his tank at the Reino Aventura amusement park in Mexico City, then driven by truck to the airport. More crowds lined the streets in Newport as Keiko was moved from the airport to the custom-built, 2 million-gallon tank where he will live at the Oregon Coast Aquarium.

TV show helps find kidnapped Seattle boy

NEW YORK — Within three hours after their story was depicted on television's "America's Most Wanted," an 8-year-old Seattle boy and his alleged kidnapper were found by FBI agents in a Manhattan hotel early Sunday.

Jason J. Murphy, 19, who faces charges of kidnapping and child molestation in Washington's Snohomish County, was being held on a federal fugitive warrant.

The boy was taken to an unidentified state medical facility in New York City, and a preliminary examination showed him to be in good health, FBI spokesman Joe Valiquette said. He refused to say if the exam indicated the boy had been molested.

The boy and Murphy had been the subjects of a nationwide search since Wednesday, when the child vanished after his mother dropped him off at a school in a Seattle suburb.

Murphy had been free on $5,000 bail on charges including a previous alleged molestation incident involving the 8-year-old.

75% of Utahns against Waldholtz re-election

SALT LAKE CITY — Three out of four of Rep. Enid Waldholtz's constituents don't want her to seek re-election in the wake of revelations about her personal and campaign financing woes, a new public opinion survey reveals.

The copyright Deseret News-KSL Poll, published Sunday, also shows that in head-to-head matchups with other candidates, the freshman Republican finishes well behind her challengers.

The survey by Dan Jones & Associates shows Waldholtz's constituents were unconvinced by her five-hour marathon news conference on Dec. 11 in which she generally blamed her estranged husband, Joe Waldholtz, for her problems.

Rep. Waldholtz has repeatedly said she will not resign, but she has not declared whether she will seek re-election this coming November.

Jones polled 272 2nd District residents Jan. 2-4. The survey has a margin for error of 6 percent.

Seventy-five percent of those interviewed said they did not want Waldholtz to run for a second term, while 14 percent wanted her to do so and 11 percent were undecided.

Jones found that in a three-way race with announced Democratic challenger Jim McConkie and possible independent rival Merrill Cook, Waldholtz would finish a distant third.

Pres. Bateman makes administration changes

By EMILY SANDERSON
Assistant Campus Editor

President Merrill J. Bateman announced on Jan. 4 two new appointments to vice-president positions at BYU.

Alan L. Wilkins will replace Todd A. Britsch as academic vice president and James D. Gordon, formerly a member of the law faculty, will replace Wilkins as associate vice president for faculty relations.

Britsch will be a presidential consultant to President Bateman for Winter Semester. He will return to the faculty as a researcher and teacher in the Department of Humanities and Comparative Literature after he takes a professional leave of absence in the spring, Britsch said.

"I went into this business to teach," he said. "I'm 58 years old and I want to spend my remaining years doing what I set out to do."

As a presidential adviser, Britsch will work on the accreditation of the university which will determine whether degrees received here are worth anything to the rest of the world.

He is working on evaluating the results of the Self Study, a full-scale evaluation of the university.

The study involves research on whether some departments should be cut back or enhanced based on technological advances, student interest and their relationship with the LDS Church.

The Self Study is also considering the natural strengths of the university and ways in which it can do more good based on facilities and faculty ability, he said.

Britsch has served as dean of the College of Humanities, as an associate academic vice president and as an academic vice president during the past decade.

Gordon has held several administrative positions which will help him with his new position of hiring and advancing the rank of faculty. He has been the chair of the faculty appointments committee, which hires new faculty and the vice chair of the academic freedom committee.

He has also been the chair of the university committee which worked on developing a seminar for training new faculty and he was a co-chair of the BYU faculty advisory council.

Gordon said he has a lot to learn about the university according to the needs of his new position.

His position's responsibilities include faculty hiring, rank advances, issuing continuing faculty status to members of faculty and responding to faculty issues, he said.

Wilkins was appointed as an associate vice president in 1994. Before then, he was chair of the Department of Organizational Behavior beginning in 1978.

OUR BOSS IS OLD

At Wilson Diamonds our boss is old. Still wears white shirts. Set in his ways. Won't listen to reason.

For instance, his shrewd accountant tells him he could easily raise prices. He says, "trust is a fragile thing." His lawyer points out that his idea of complete warranties costs extra money and time. He says "a good man always keeps his word."

His contemporary suppliers assert that customers will buy what everyone else is selling. He says "A Wilson diamond must be more brilliant."

His 90's business consultant protests that it takes too long to answer all of a customer's questions. He says "pressure is a poor substitute for substance."

Utah celebrates 100th birthday, commissions centennial stamp

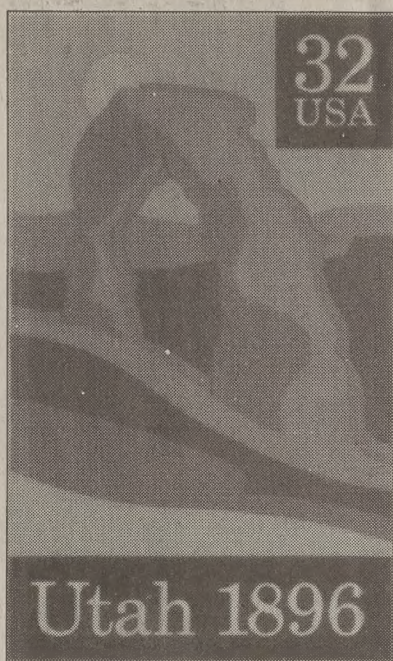

See related story on page 7

By VALERIE O'BARR
Universe Staff Writer

Utah kicked off its 100-year birthday party with help from local communities, organizations and even the U.S. Postal Service and a BYU employee. The Postal Service has contributed to Utah's centennial by commissioning a special centennial stamp that is now available at local post offices throughout the state. The designer of the stamp, McRay Magleby, is the creative director for publications at BYU.

According to a press release, Magleby was named "Designer of the Decade" in 1986 by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. He was recently named one of the "12 most influential designers" in America by HOW magazine. Magleby said he was contacted by the Postal Service in Washington, D.C., a few years ago to commission him to do the centennial stamp.

"They told me they would prefer the stamp to have no religious or political overtones, which eliminated about 90 percent of things that have to do with Utah," he said, explaining his choice of using Delicate Arch in his design.

Centennial celebrations began in Salt Lake last week with a re-enactment of the telegraphic announcement of Utah's statehood. The festivities continued throughout the week, with lectures, bands and historical displays available to the curious public. Mary Peach, the information specialist for the division of state history in Utah, considered the week's events to be a success.

"Everyone was in a very celebratory mood," she said, "I think we were very successful."

More people attended the activities than were expected, Peach said.

"People were taking their children out of school to come see the events," she said. She also noted how impressed the public was by how much they were able to learn about the history of the state in only one or two days.

A crowd-pleasing highlight of the week was a ragtime orchestra, playing the "park band" style of music that was popular around 1896.

Many activities are also planned for the rest of the year, mostly by individual counties.

Provo has opened a pictorial exhibit at the Provo City Center, featuring pictures of the first downtown Provo and the home of the first Brigham Young Academy. Lewis Billings, the acting chief administrative officer for the Provo City mayor's office, said the exhibit is a great way to see how the town, and BYU, has progressed. The exhibit is free to the public, and Billings said group lectures are available on request.

Utah representatives express frustration with political wrangling in Washington

By KAREN SNOW
Universe Staff Writer

The lengthy feud between congressional Republicans and President Clinton rages on as the embattled federal budget continues to plague the national agenda.

Tensions between the White House and the GOP Congress are magnified as the budget reconciliation scramble continues. The political wrangling on Capitol Hill has had ill effects: many long-term politicians are announcing they will not return to office, Congress is in an impasse on the budget and public opinion polls are dropping.

In my view, the president is driven more by the desire for re-election," said Sen. Bob Bennett, R-Utah.

Republicans have taken control of the political debate, and Clinton is in a defensive mode claiming we should stay as we are," Bennett said. Ideologically, the control of the agenda is in the hands of the Republicans."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he would not classify relations between the House and the White House as contentious, but he and other congressional Republicans have been frustrated with Clinton's negotiating strategy on the budget.

It appears to us that the President and his budget priorities based on the latest polls, not on what is best for the country in the long term," Hatch said. "It seems the White House would be content to put another Band-Aid on a bleeding budget hemorrhaging red ink." The 1994 election year shook government customs and set political priorities on its ear. Fresh, eager Republicans regarded as outsiders to the political game took over the House, unseating well-established, seasoned Representatives.

Both Bennett and Hatch agreed that a large percentage of the House's new membership is determined to change the way government is conducted throughout thought to re-election.

AP Photo

SEE WHAT I MEAN? President Clinton talks with House Speaker Newt Gingrich before a meeting in the Cabinet Room of the White House to discuss the federal budget impasse in December. As budget talks continue, tension continues to mount between the GOP Congress and Clinton.

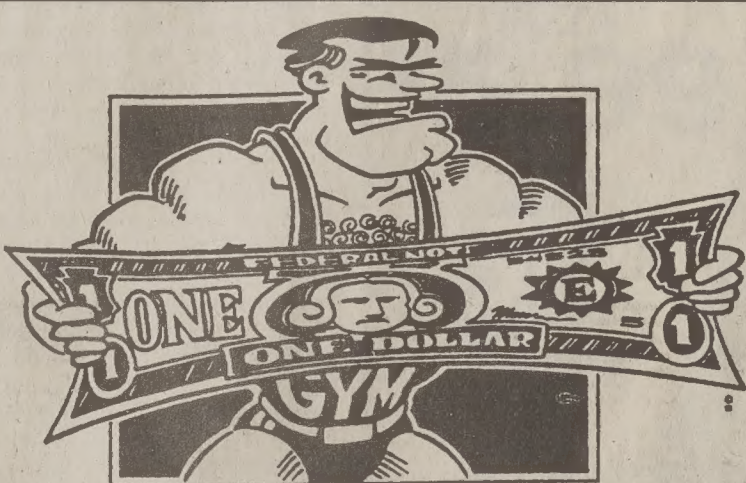

Rep. Bill Orton, D-Utah, contradicted Republican favoritism, disagreeing with Congress' negotiation strategies on the budget reconciliation.

"Congress is trying to blame the President when, in fact, it is their responsibility," Orton said.

When proposing an alternate budget proposal drawn by the Coalition, a group of conservative House Democrats, Orton said he disagreed with the political wrangling between parties.

"What I and the Coalition and the Senate allies are saying to both parties is that it's time to stop the partisan wrangling and maneuvering to gain some political advantage, and sit down together to solve the problem," he said.

Hatch said that "members of Congress and the President must look beyond the next election and look at what is going to happen a generation from now if we cannot get our budget balanced."

New Presiding Bishopric called

By RUSTY PAYNE
Senior Reporter

The First Presidency recently announced the calling of H. David Burton as Presiding Bishop of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Burton replaced Merrill J. Bateman, who assumed presidency of BYU Jan. 1.

Bishop Burton previously served as first counselor to President Bateman in the Presiding Bishopric.

Bishop Richard C. Edgley was called as the new first counselor. Bishop Edgley formerly served as second counselor in the Presiding Bishopric.

Keith B. McMullin, managing director of the Welfare Services Department of the church, replaced Bishop Edgley as second counselor.

Bishop Burton is a native of Salt Lake City. He was called to the Presiding Bishopric in October 1992 and served under President Bateman and Bishop Robert D. Hales, who is now a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

Bishop Bateman also served as assistant church budget officer, and for 14 years as secretary to the Presiding Bishop. He and his wife Barbara Matheson Burton are the parents of five children.

Also, plans for a second temple in Mexico were announced during the holidays.

Monterrey will be the site of the new temple, serving members from 49 stakes and 20 mission districts.

It will ease traffic in the Mexico City temple, formerly the nation's only one. It was dedicated in 1983.

The LDS church has 47 operating temples and another 15 in the planning and construction stages.

Open your spiritual eyes,' Pres. Faust says

By JANNA NIELSEN
Campus Editor

President James E. Faust called on the hearts and minds of students to open their eyes to spiritual prompts from the Lord at his fireside Sunday in the Marriott Center.

Open your spiritual eyes — tune in to the hearts and souls to the exact spot where the spiritual signals are coming from, he said.

“Ah,” said President Faust, second in line in the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

President Faust spoke of both the Holy Ghost and of spiritual gifts, the appearance of or manifestation of God.

Many men and leaders throughout history have received an epiphany or a vision of God’s light, he said.

These include men such as Confucius, Mohammed and Jesus Christ.

“Spiritual epiphanies have often come to young people as well, he said.

Prophet Samuel is an example of a young person who received a spiritual epiphany, President Faust said.

Samuel heard the Lord speaking to him and went to Eli saying, “Here I am.” He did this three times before Eli told him to reply to the voice and tell the Lord to speak.

Samuel did this and the Lord spoke to him. He came to know and to understand God, President Faust said.

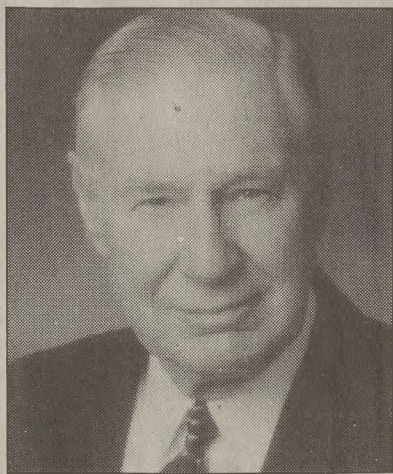

“There is a profound lesson in the story of Samuel. We are to come to know the Lord so that when he calls we can tell him to speak to us,” President Faust said.

President Faust said the ability to tune in and hear the voice of the spirit will take work and time, but is available to all righteous people.

In listening for the voice of the spirit, “we must submit to God’s will,” he said. As this is done, “we will look back at the bumps of life and see how the Lord has shaped us.”

President Faust also pointed out that epiphany and the gift of the Holy Ghost are two different things.

Many men and women can be inspired of God to do great things, he said. Handel’s Messiah and William

PRESIDENT FAUST

Wordsworth’s poems are examples of this.

These people have brought marvelous things to the world, but these things are different from the gift of the Holy Ghost, he said.

“Those possessing the gift can come to greater light and testimony — so deeply that no earthly power can separate man or woman from the truth,” President Faust said.

Book markup lower at BYU due to policy

By DIXIE HARRIS
Universe Staff Writer

What happens at the beginning of every semester: sticker shock at the bookstore.

Students hear the bookstore register beep-beep-beep, they are often baffled by the five digit number (including decimals) illuminated on the register showing the amount of money they are required to hand over for the sake of their education.

College textbooks may seem expensive but they could cost BYU students more if the bookstore’s policy was different, said Brent Laker, assistant director of books at the BYU bookstore.

“We do everything we can to keep prices down and help the student,” Laker said.

He said at 23 percent, BYU adds the lowest margin to the publishers of all Utah colleges, and BYU is one of the largest book buyers in the country.

“The normal markup of a text book is 30 percent, which is what UVSC does,” said UVSC textbook manager Roxanna Fernelius.

“I think BYU is the only bookstore that has a lower markup (than UVSC),” Fernelius said.

Textbook prices may vary from school to school due to enrollment changes, Laker said.

“Smaller schools may charge a book from 30 to 33 percent because costs may be higher with smaller students,” Laker said.

Compared to other universities and the country, BYU has a relatively small student population of about 30,000, yet BYU’s bookstore has the highest markup in the nation in the amount of textbooks sold, Laker said.

“Many textbooks are written by BYU professors in order to cater to the needs of the academic curriculum,” Laker said.

“Professors often feel they have something to contribute to teaching, which is a motivating factor behind professional writing books,” said Fred Skousen, dean of the Marriott School of Management.

“I’ve said through teaching experience that professors find different ways to help students learn. These ideas should be incorporated into textbooks.

Skousen said royalties from textbook writing are relatively small, about 10 to 15 percent for hardback and 5 to 10 percent for paperback, depending on the publisher. Skousen said when he first published over 20 years ago the royalties were 22 percent.

Laker said publishing textbooks can be lucrative for publishers and authors, especially if a text is used nationwide. However, if a professor writes a text for only one school the royalties are probably very small.

Skousen co-authored, with Steve Albrecht and James Stice, “Accounting Concepts and Applications, fifth edition” used by Accounting 200 and 210 students at BYU. He estimated the textbook is used at 75 to 100 universities nationwide.

Skousen said it took five years to get the first edition into print because they started from scratch. Textbooks are usually revised every three years.

Skousen said it typically takes the authors a year to rewrite the text and create new problems and solutions, then the publisher takes another year to revise the printing.

When university professors write and revise textbooks it also creates an opportunity for graduate students to help. It creates a good experience for the student and helps the authors considerably, Skousen said.

“We often use top graduate students to help write textbooks,” Skousen said. “A number of graduate students have helped over the years.”

One such student was Norman Nemrow, who now teaches

Accounting 200, Skousen said.

Many BYU professors are also publishing packets catered to their courses in order to keep prices down for the students. The majority of professors don’t ask for any money and if they do the amount is minimal, said Justin Rex, a manager at Alexander’s Print Shop in Provo.

Auditing gives students less homework but no credit

By JENNIFER ABSHER
Senior Reporter

Auditing a class enables students to take a class without receiving credit, something that students might find to be useful.

“I wanted to take a bunch of classes but I didn’t have time to do the work for all of them so I decided to audit a religion class so I could go and learn from it without worrying about the work,” said Jeff Curtis, a senior from Chino, Calif., majoring in Physics.

To change a class from credit to audit, students must use an add/drop card during the first 10 days of classes. Add/drop cards are available in the Registration Office.

“Students must obtain the instructor’s approval on a signed add/drop card,” states the Winter 1996 class schedule. “It is not possible to register for an audit class on the Touch-tone telephone system.”

Students are charged the same tuition for auditing classes as for taking classes for credit.

Part-time students can audit a class but they will be charged for the cost of the class.

“The classes taken on an audit basis will not appear on a student’s official records, will not be considered in calculating enrollment verifications and do not fulfill the minimum registration requirement for graduate degree seeking students,” the schedule book states.

“I stopped going to the class in the middle of the semester because I had too much work in my other classes and the religion class was a lower priority, but I have considered auditing other classes,” Curtis said.

President and Sister Merrill J. Bateman

Elder Merrill J. Bateman, a member of the Church’s First Quorum of the Seventy, became BYU’s 11th president on January 1, 1996. Formerly the Church’s Presiding Bishop, Elder Bateman is married to Marilyn Scholes Bateman. They are parents of seven children and grandparents of 17.

President Bateman brings to his new position a background of strong administrative and academic experience.

Prior to his call as a General Authority, Elder Bateman headed his own consulting and capital management companies. He earlier served as dean of the College of Business and the School of Management (now the Marriott School of Management) at BYU.

Before joining BYU’s faculty, he was an executive with Mars, Inc., in England and in the United States.

President and Sister Bateman attended American Fork High School together. Sister Bateman is a Logan, Utah, native who grew up in American Fork and later attended BYU and the U of U.

President Bateman earned a bachelor’s degree in economics at the U of U and a doctorate in the same subject from MIT. He was an Air Force Academy instructor early in his academic career.

President Bateman has served the Church as a missionary, ward bishop, stake high counselor, stake president, and regional representative.

Sister Bateman has “happily served as a right arm to President Bateman through many years and many moves. I’m looking forward to being a part of the BYU community again, working with the faculty, students, administrators, and staff here,” she stated.

Law library renovation on fast track

by CHRISTINA REYNOLDS
Universe Staff Writer

Renovations to the newly renamed Ward W. Hunter Law Library are proceeding smoothly and will bring more space, natural light and new technology to the J. Reuben Clark Law Building.

To accommodate a growing collection of books, the renovations will more than double the library's original 40,000 square feet to become 80,000 square feet, said Craig Barrus, assistant manager of the BYU construction center and coordinator of construction for the law library.

The renovations should cost approximately $11 million, all of which has been contributed by private donors such as alumni, said Constance Lundberg, law librarian and associate dean of the law school. BYU has not traditionally asked so much of alumni, but graduates are still playing a part. This is wonderful and thrilling, she said.

Construction is a year ahead of schedule," Lundberg said. She attributes this to "a wonderful contract manager, Craig Barrus, ... who worked hard to be sure we weren't slowing things down."

Construction began May 15, 1995, and completion is projected for November of this year, Barrus said.

One of the welcomed changes to the library will be an increase in natural light from windows on the north side of the addition.

Some were frustrated with the old library because it was so dark, Lundberg said. North-facing windows will provide a comfortable atmosphere where people can work productively, she said.

On the north side, we tried to provide as many windows as possible," said Warren Jones, in-house architect at BYU. The windows open onto rolling landscaped hills, he said.

The addition is meant to blend in with existing architecture, said Brent Harker, director of BYU Public Communications.

There will be slit windows on the east and west sides," Jones said, and the building will be made out of precast concrete to match the existing building.

The floor space of the library is being increased on the second and third floors for additional shelving of study areas, and the circulation desk will move from the third floor to the second floor, which is the ground floor, Barrus said.

The circulation desk is being relocated to the second floor because that is where the most traffic is, Jones said.

COMING SOON: More windows on the north side of the law library will alleviate lighting problems of the past. Other improvements to the library will include more floor space and new technology.

one floor at a time, moving the collections around so books can be accessed, but sometimes it is still inconvenient to retrieve them, Barrus said.

Careful planning and coordination with the contractor has been the key to being able to keep the library open and functioning during construction, Lundberg said, explaining "you can't study law without books."

At least one copy of the essential books are on the shelves while second copies and low-use books are in storage elsewhere on campus and in space donated by Nu Skin International, Lundberg said.

The library will be completely closed for about a week, however — probably at the end of February or the beginning of March, when the circulation desk is moved to the second floor, she said.

Also because of construction, 125 parking spaces have been lost, 100 of which will not be replaced. Most law students also lost their study carrels until construction is completed, Barrus said. However, temporary loss of study carrels will end when new carrels, each having their own computer hookup, are installed.

The biggest change at the library will be the high-tech component, Lundberg said.

"It will be a SMART building, meaning adaptable to computers," where the walls and floors will have conduits with fiber optics, she said.

"Every study carrel will have a hookup that connects to university networks, the Internet, Local Area Networks, and the Harold B. Lee Library systems, she said.

Lundberg said she is working on a project to create a centralized library service for the 14 academic institutions in Utah. The institutions will all use the same programs to facilitate interlibrary research. When this comes about, it will also be available from every carrel, she said.

A large computer lab on the fourth floor will include an instructional room for library research and computer classes, Lundberg said.

The library will house 40 group-study rooms to be used mostly by law students but they will also be available to other BYU students, especially during construction on the Harold B. Lee Library, Lundberg said.

The library will have a small microfiche room and a small rare-book room with climate controls, she said. Summing it up, Scott Cameron, associate dean of the law school, said the library will be "very user-friendly."

Along with renovations, a seismic upgrade to the entire building is being done, said Mike Stratton, manager of BYU construction.

In renovation, the new areas must be in higher seismic zone categories, but upgrades are not required for existing buildings, he said.

Half of the upgrade to the law building was done last summer, Lundberg said. The remaining half will come in a separate contract, with bidding starting this spring or summer, Stratton said.

Construction of the original law school was completed in 1976, and with the exception of the compact shelving added to the first floor of the library, this is the first major renovation, Barrus said.

The renovations have occurred in steps, Lundberg said. In 1988, the university decided a renovation to the library would be done; the planning budget was then approved in the early 1990s, she said.

Lundberg said the renovation, which was primarily to accommodate growth of the collections, is designed to sustain spatial needs for the next 20 years.

However, with the move toward higher levels of technology that do not call for as much shelf space, the law school hopes the renovations will last longer she said.

Short Christmas stories sought for writing contest, publication

Universe Services

Covenant Communications, Inc., has announced an open competition for writers interested in submitting short fiction or nonfiction pieces with a Christmas theme.

Having just returned from the Christmas holiday, students may have stories or ideas that can be submitted to the contest.

The contest, which runs until May 1, offers a grand prize of $100 and publication of the author's work. Second- and third-place winners will receive $75 and $50 respectively, and their work will be considered for publication by Covenant.

"Over the past few years," explained managing editor JoAnn Jolley "Covenant has developed a tradition of publishing wonderful, heartwarming little booklets each Christmas. While Covenant publishes books relating primarily to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Christmas stories submitted for the contest need not have an LDS theme.

For more information and contest rules, contact JoAnn Jolley at Covenant Communications Inc., P.O. Box 416, American Fork, Utah 84003.

2 charged with stealing $2,000 in books from Lee Library

By JENNIFER GANTT ABSHER
Senior Reporter

More than the usual overdue books were missing from the Harold B. Lee Library last semester. In fact, more than $2,000 worth of stolen books were covered on Oct. 26 with the help of a BYU security employee.

Jeanette Farnsworth, a former BYU student from New Mexico, and Robert Baldowski from Pennsylvania, have been charged by the Utah County attorney's office with a third-degree felony for the theft of the library materials. Baldowski, along with Farnsworth, who is disabled and uses braces for walking, would mix the stolen books with books that were legitimately checked out. When the anti-theft alarms sounded as the woman tried to leave the library, she could claim that it was probably her braces, and the library staffers would let her through, said Lt. Arnold Lemmon of the University Police.

In early October, a library security employee checked Farnsworth's bag before allowing her to pass and found books with the identifying bar code marked out, which led to the University Police's visit to Baldowski's home where they recovered a collection of BYU library books on physics, chemistry, electronics and other subjects, Lemmon said.

Farnsworth, 36, was a sophomore with an open major in Spring Term 1988. Baldowski is 42.

"Both have been permanently banned from campus," said Lemmon. "The library has contracted with the University Police to provide security, and that will help cut down on theft."

There are plans for upgrading security efforts with a new alarm system once construction on the library is finished, Lemmon said.

"Security people have been doing the checkout, and security people were the ones who caught these two," said Brent Harker, director of BYU Public Communications, in an Associated Press story.

New Year's resolutions to lose fat help fitness industry gain profits

By TIFFANY TERRY
Universe Staff Writer

A beautiful, thin blonde is staring towards a piece of chocolate cake and smiling triumphantly. The caption reads: "This is how I keep you New Year's resolution, with the help of minimum Strength Training."

It's like this are gracing the pages of January editions of fashion and ladies magazines.

The image industry has shed out the big guns for a month of new goals and resolutions.

To do some special programs at the first of the year that are very effective," said Bryan Luscomb, spokesman for Jenny Craig International.

As a result, weight loss fitness programs expect a January business boom.

January we see a big increase... about a 50 percent increase," said Diane Gray, owner of Provo location of Diet Center.

Everybody's got a New Year's resolution."

Jenny Craig and Weight Watchers representatives say they experience similar surges.

different weight loss centers offer different types of programs with different levels of control.

One characteristic stays the same for most programs, however. The personal or group counselor gives support and encouragement to those on the program.

"For some reason, humans have to answer to someone in order to stick to the program," said Gwen Murri, a leader trainer at the Utah-Idaho franchise of Weight Watchers.

The Jenny Craig, Weight Watchers and Diet Center programs both encourage a well-rounded approach to weight loss.

Eating modifications, exercise and behavioral changes are all important aspects to maintaining successful weight loss.

"Diets are not effective for this reason," Luscomb said. "If you've only temporarily changed your eating to achieve your goal, without exercise and behavioral changes you will gain it back."

Of all three aspects (eating, exercise and behavioral changes) people seem to struggle with consistent exercise programs the most, Murri said.

"It's difficult to change

TEMPTATION: A burger with fries and soda isn't the meal weight loss programs are recommending for goal-setters hoping to lose weight this year.

habits — the bad ones creep back into your life," Murri said.

"Exercise seems to be the hardest for most people," Tenney said. "People make excuses. We can't afford not to exercise."

There are other people who are more motivated to exercise and seek places to work out on a regular basis.

As a result, the fitness industry also reaps financial benefits from January's traditional goal setting.

"We see a big swing in January because of people's New Year's Resolutions," said Stacey MacSparran the club director at Lifestyles 2000 Fitness Center.

Sundance Film Festival tickets on sale today for Utahns

By COLEEN DOWNEY
Universe Staff Reporter

Individual event tickets for the internationally recognized 1996 Sundance Film Festival go on sale today for residents.

The festival is set to begin Jan. 18 and run through Jan. 28 in Park City. Tickets may be purchased in Salt Lake City at the Crossroads Plaza, in Park City at the Gateway Building and in the General Store at Sundance.

This year there are 18 dramatic features and 16 documentaries competing in the dramatic and documentary competitions. According to the Competition Selection Advisory Board and the Sundance programming staff, "these films represent the range and diversity of the American film community."

The Sundance Film Festival continues its formative role in giving visibility and prominence to American independent cinema in all its diversity and scope. We are lucky to be able to showcase the broadest range of cinematic — dramatic and documentary — that is artistically challenging or politically motivated," said Jeffrey Gilmore, director of programming for the Sundance Film Festival.

Sundance Film Festival introduces the American Spectrum program this year. The 20 films in this program are not competing in the independent competition but are selected to give the "emerging filmmakers the recognition they deserve," according to the Sundance Film Festival.

can compete in the Independent Feature Film Competition, dramatic and documentary feature films must be "independently produced with at least 51 percent U.S. financing," said Sandra Saperstein of the Sundance Institute. Premieres and panel discussions will also be a part of the film festival.

In 1981, Robert Redford founded the Sundance Institute, a nonprofit arts organization, which sponsors the Sundance Film Festival. The Institute is "dedicated to the support and development of emerging screenwriters and directors of vision, and to the national and international exhibition of new American independent cinema. The Institute offers essential artistic and professional resources to over three hundred artists every year," according to the Sundance Institute.

Centennial theme fills Utah galleries

By AMY COWIN
Universe Staff Reporter

Numerous galleries throughout the state will display Utah art throughout 1996 as part of the Centennial Celebration commemorating 100 years of statehood.

The Utah Museum of Fine Arts has an exhibit entitled "Images of the Great Salt Lake" on display through March 3.

Admission to the exhibit is free, and museum hours are Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and weekends 12 to 5 p.m.

The exhibition explores the historic and artistic attraction of the Great Salt Lake.

A historic photograph exhibit will be on display January 13, 1996 through January 12, 1997 at the LDS Museum of Church History and Art in Salt Lake City. The collection contains photographs of Utah 100 years ago, giving a realistic view of what the state looked like when it became a state.

In addition to art displays, theaters in the area will also be promoting the Centennial Celebration.

The SCERA Center Theater in Orem will be presenting the musical production of Crawford Gates' "A Promised Valley" June 3 through 15 at their outdoor theater.

"The presentation tells the history of Utah in song," marketing director

April Wetzel said. "It includes everything from when pioneers came into the valley and when Utah achieved its statehood status."

The SCERA Theater will also host its regular outdoor season with performances that will be tied in to the Centennial Celebration.

The Utah Opera will present a commissioned new work "Dréan keepers" Jan. 13, 15, 17 and 19, 7:30 p.m. and Jan. 21 at 2 p.m. in Salt Lake City's Capitol Theatre.

The Centennial opera tells the story of a young Utah woman who returns to the reservation to visit her dying grandmother. Tickets can be purchased at ArtTix locations or by calling 355-ARTS.

Comeback Cougars Too much for Broncos

By JON MANO
Assistant Sports Editor

Although school hadn't started yet, the BYU women's basketball team learned a valuable lesson Saturday night. Never give up. Never, never give up.

A season-high crowd of 742 people saw the Cougars come from behind to defeat Boise State 72-70 in a frantic, sometimes sloppy game.

BYU (6-6) was down 38-29 at the break and was behind by as many as 20 points early in the second half. But intense rebounding and BYU forward Kari Gallup's 12 second-half points kept BYU in the game.

With 5:09 left to play, BYU trailed 65-55. BYU then went to a full-court press, and BSU turned it over twice during the next minute.

"The biggest thing (for us) was the press," BYU coach Soni Adams said. "They turned it over a couple of times which gave us momentum, and (the game) slipped away from them."

Junior guard Kim Morris provided the spark for BYU's comeback. Morris, who struggled slightly in the first half, reeled off seven straight points over a 25-second span to cut BSU's lead to 63-62 with 4:44 remaining.

"In the first half I was rushing my outside shot," said Morris, who led the Cougars with 18 points. "I was looking to take it to the hole (in the second half) instead of rely on my outside shot."

BSU was unable to answer, and Shannon MacCormac hit a key three-pointer to put BYU ahead for good 65-63.

After going scoreless for over three minutes, BSU finally scored with 1:29 remaining. BYU guard Cindy Pierce countered BSU's attack, scoring BYU's final five points.

With 18 seconds left, the Broncos still had a chance to tie or win. Down 72-70 with the ball, BSU bricked a three-pointer, but then got the offensive rebound. Forward Kim Brydges missed two tip-ins as time expired. BSU coaches screamed for a foul, but the referees declared the game over.

A big difference in the second half was BYU's defense on forward Michelle Schultz. Schultz, BSU's leading scorer, burned BYU with 17 points in the first half.

"We talked about Schultz at half-time," Adams said. "We knew if she kept getting points that easily, we would lose this game."

Although Schultz ended with a game-high 20 points, BYU harassed Schultz into a 1 for 9 shooting in the second half.

Although it was a non-conference game against a team that is now 3-9,

Adams felt it was a big win.

"We needed to be at least .500 going into the WAC," she said. "I felt we needed to gain momentum from this game, especially after that disappointing game at Idaho State."

The Cougars' next game will be Thursday at San Diego State.

Confident Cougars look to shoot down Air Force

By MATT WRIGHT
Sports Editor

There may have been good news in BYU's hoop loss to the University of Utah Tuesday night.

To the surprise of oddsmakers in Las Vegas (BYU was a 17-point underdog) and all in attendance at the Huntsman Center — except for the Cougars themselves — BYU played well enough to lead the 15th-ranked Utes at the half. The game was close throughout, and BYU had its chances to pull off an upset.

"We went up with the idea to win, and we gave them a great effort," coach Roger Reid said. "We feel like if we play hard, we have a chance to win any game."

"Going down the wire and having a chance to win against a top-rated team, confidence-wise, that is a plus. It will help going in the WAC."

Playing in a hostile environment helps a team mature, center Ken Roberts said.

"I think it helps you to grow up," he said. "It teaches us that we have to go out and play, no matter what the fans are saying or doing. It matters what we do on the court."

The Cougars continue the early WAC season with a late-afternoon game today against the Air Force Academy at the Marriott Center.

After a 4-14 conference record a year ago, the Falcons don't appear to be too formidable an opponent for the Cougars. Ever the wary coach, however, Reid isn't ready to promise a victory quite yet.

"You can't overlook anybody in the game of basketball," Reid said. "You've got to play hard, and that is what we try to do."

The Falcons enter today's game with a 4-6 record overall. Reid said Air Force's schedule has not been that difficult, with Division II schools making up a great deal of its early-season competition.

If the series history between the Cougars and Falcons is any indication, BYU should claw past the visitors. Of 36 head-to-head meetings, the Cougars have come away with 31 wins. The last BYU loss in the series was in 1989 in the Marriott Center.

Two freshman have been major contributors for the Cougars this season, and it should be no different against Air Force.

Todd Christensen and Nathan Cooper are among the first players off the bench, and they've helped the team by adding necessary depth.

"It allows us to have a deeper bench. If it weren't for those two guys, I don't know what we would do," Roberts said. "They play hard."

Cooper's hard play was exhibited against Utah by his six points, eight rebounds and a near-fight with Ute Keith Van Horn. Cooper tried to block a Van Horn shot, and fouled him a little too hard for Van Horn's liking. Van Horn pushed Cooper and a shouting match ensued.

"It was just the intensity of the game," Cooper said. "It was no big deal; there are no hard feelings here."

NFL playoffs: Colts, Cowboys move to next round

Cowboys 30
Eagles 11

Associated Press

WING, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys finally got their $35 million worth out of Deion Sanders and led right into their fourth straight championship game.

Sanders, despite his $250,000 per year salary, had little impact until today, when he took a reverse 21-yard pass for a touchdown that broke a 3-3 tie at 4:35 of the second quarter.

The Cowboys went on to beat the Philadelphia Eagles 30-11 and will try their third Super Bowl trip in four years when they play Green Bay at the next Sunday.

The Eagles, who split regular-season games with the Cowboys, lost their first game early in the second quarter after quarterback Rodney Peete was knocked out of the game with a concussion. He was replaced by an ineffective Randall Cunningham.

Emmitt Smith made it 17-3 with a 1-yard TD run with 3:42 left in the half and the Eagles never recovered. Chris Boniol kicked three field goals and Troy Aikman hit Michael Irvin with a 9-yard TD pass in the fourth quarter.

Sanders finally made a dramatic play for the Cowboys — and it came on offense.

He got the ball from Aikman on a flanker reverse but discovered end Mike Mamula waiting.

Sanders, the fastest player in the NFL at 4.1 in the 40, quickly changed directions and got a block from Irvin and scored standing up.

Until Sunday, Sanders had two interceptions but hadn't contributed much on offense. He also showed he can still play defense, intercepting a Cunningham pass late in the fourth period and returning it 12 yards.

Peete, who had the flu to start with, was knocked woozy in a second-quarter collision with safety Darren Woodson. Cunningham missed practice all week because he was in Las Vegas, where he wife had a son.

Colts 10
Chiefs 7

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Undermanned and in hostile territory, the Indianapolis Colts didn't flinch and moved within a victory of the Super Bowl when Kansas City kicker Lin Elliott missed a last-minute field goal.

Yes, the Colts, one of the biggest surprises in recent playoff history, became the first visitor to win at Arrowhead Stadium with a 10-7 decision Sunday. They eliminated the Chiefs, who had the league's best record this season, and will play at Pittsburgh next weekend for a shot at their first Super Bowl since winning it in 1971.

Cary Blanchard's 31-yard field goal late in the third quarter was the difference. Elliott failed from 43 yards, his third miss of the game, with 37 seconds to go.

In frigid weather, the Colts, without star runner Marshall Faulk — out with a knee injury — controlled the ball against the league's second-rated defense. They also forced four turnovers from the Chiefs.

"It's a tremendous tribute to our ball club," said Colts coach Ted Marchibroda, who tied Don Shula's club record of 73 career coaching wins. "We deserve all this. We beat a good football team today."

In the first quarter, Steve Bono hit his first playoff TD pass with a 20-yard throw to Lake Dawson, who also got his first postseason score.

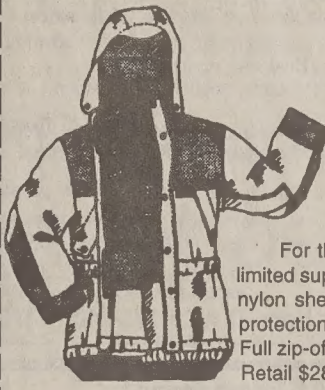

Indianapolis came right back with an impressive 18-play, 77-yard drive sparked by Harbaugh's 18-yard scramble. The Colts scored on Floyd Turner's 5-yard scoring catch and a 7-7 tie.

Blanchard was short on a 47-yard field goal and Elliott missed a 35-yarder just before halftime. Elliott also missed a 39-yarder early in the fourth period.

Blanchard made his 31-yarder with 12:12 gone in the third quarter for a 10-7 lead.

Support for abortion, casual sex decreasing among college freshmen

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — College freshmen are voicing dwindling support for casual sex and legal abortion, a survey found. But they have more liberal views on marijuana, with support for legalization reaching a 15-year high.

Support for keeping abortion legal rose steadily in the 1980s, according to the University of California's annual freshmen survey. But in the 1995 survey, it declined for the third straight year, to 58 percent.

In 1987, 52 percent of the freshmen responding to the survey supported casual sex. Now, 43 percent say it's OK for two people to have sex even if they've only known each other a short time.

"There are more diseases and stuff. And I just don't think I want to sleep with the first person they meet. They want to get to know them better," said Dennise Ledesma, a 19-year-old freshman at California State University-Los Angeles.

Among college freshmen, the belief that homosexual relationships should be prohibited has declined from 53 percent in 1987 to an all-time low of 30.6 percent. And support for legalizing marijuana has risen to 34 percent — double the 17 percent who held that view in 1989.

"It's so abundant. It's no big deal because everybody is doing it," said Jason Zavada, a 19-year-old freshman at the University of Kentucky who supports legalization. "We don't see all the bad it's causing. It's an insane policy to punish people like criminals for using something that comes from the earth."

More than half the freshmen surveyed labeled their political views as "middle-of-the-road." But the 30-year-old survey says growing bands of liberals and conservatives are moving farther to the left and right.

For the first time in the history of the survey, we have a situation where the large majority of young people are moving toward the center at the same time the small minorities at the extremes are growing," said Alexander W. Astin, a professor and director of the survey conducted by UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute.

The fall survey, sponsored by the American Council on Education, was given to 323,791 entering freshman at 641 two-year and four-year colleges and universities. Of these, 240,082 questionnaires from 473 institutions were used. The institute then weighted the data in an effort to make it reflective of the views of the nation's 1.5 million first-time college freshmen.

The survey showed that students' commitment to keeping up-to-date with political affairs dropped for a third straight year, to an all-time low of 28.5 percent, compared with a high of nearly 58 percent in 1966.

Student activism rose at the beginning of the 1990s, but since then freshmen have become less interested in influencing politics and social values, cleaning up the environment and promoting racial understanding and participating in a community action program. Since 1992, freshmen interest dropped from 3 percent to 11 percent in each of these categories.

Not surprising then is the finding that the number of students who believe individuals can "do little to change society" reached a 10-year high at nearly 34 percent.

"Apparently, increasing political apathy goes hand-in-hand with disengagement from social action and a growing sense of powerlessness," Astin said.

Joe Galli, chairman of the College Republican National Committee, vehemently disagrees.

"I think student activism is at an all-time low ... not because of a sense of powerlessness, but because they are cynical of government and false politicians," Galli said. "And I think that is the reason why they are becoming more conservative."

A majority of college freshmen expressed support for the use of race as a basis for college admission. The freshmen, however, are shying away from the term "affirmative action."

Mild aftershock, small earthquakes hit California

Associated Press

A moderate aftershock to last September's Ridgecrest earthquake and a swarm of smaller quakes rattled Southern California early Sunday, though no damage or injuries were reported.

A 5.2-magnitude temblor struck at 6:32 a.m. and was centered 10 miles north of this high desert town, said seismologist Jim Mori at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

"It shook pretty good here. It sounded like a sonic boom. We sort of bounced around here for five or six seconds," said Lori Benson, a dispatcher with the Ridgecrest Police Department. It was followed by six smaller quakes in the same area, all 3.0-magnitude or stronger, in less than two hours.
